Chapter X

CUSTOMS AND MANNERS OF THE SEVENTEENTH CENTURY

THE records of Surry do not begin until 1652 and the records of James City County prior to that time are destroyed. Extracts from the records after 1652 show something of the customs, manners, religious beliefs and general conduct of the early settlers who came to this country to obtain a fuller measure of liberty. We can thus determine how far we have progressed. Then as now the harshness of the laws on one generation are modified in another. Sometimes re-enacted they were enforced by other leaders and governors with great vigor. Even in our own times, from 1920 to 1932, no one was free to buy a drink of anything stronger than near beer. So we need not consider as very queer and harsh some of the customs and laws of those early times. "Eternal Vigilance is the price of Liberty." Today we not only have a multiplicity of laws but often a "duplicity" of them. The fewer the laws and regulations the more freedom of individual liberty. Nuisance laws are usually brought about by minority pressure groups contrary to the will of the majority.

The first General Assembly of Virginia passed a law requiring every citizen to attend divine services on Sunday. If one was delinquent the penalty was a fine of three shillings. This fine was reduced to one shilling in 1652. In 1675 the grand jury of Surry presented twenty-nine persons for violating the Sabbath by not attending their parish churches. They were Thomas Clarke, presenting himself; Nathaniel Knight, Henry Briggs, William Rookins, Barthalmew Owen, William Nance, Richard Parker, George Middleton, John Moss, Richard Tias, Thomas Senior, Edmond Howell, John Orchard, Old Mrs. Symonds, John Barker, Jr., William Short, William Harvey, William Draper, Edward Greene, Long John Phillips, John Hunnicutt, James Watkins, Adam Heath, John Miniard, Thomas Busby, Richard Royer, Thomas Bird, Daniel Williams, John Skinner. (Bk. 2, p. 83.)

On December 30, 1678, Thomas Sowerby, Samuel Judkins, John Watkins and John King, members of the Grand Jury, presented to the Court, Thomas Hunt and Robert Lee for not attending church. Also Thomas Senior, Edward Davis, John Rawliston, Nicholas Johnson, Robert Evans, Walter Vaughan, Richard Tyas, Sr. were presented by Thomas Crews.

Martin Thorne, Nicholas Wilson, Matthew Swann, Robert Kae, of the Grand Jury of the Lower Parish presented for not attending church: John Bynum, John Shepheard, Daniel Wade—not settled and not attending church. (Bk. 2, p. 194.)

Many of the above persons refused to pay tithes or attend church because they were Quakers.

Nowadays golf games on Sunday morning seem to prevent some persons from attending church, but in those days people lingered in taverns. Samuel Thompson, the son of William Thompson, a former minister of Southwark Parish, and a Burgess and prominent citizen, like many of the prominent citizens of those days kept an "Ordinary" or Inn. In 1681 he gave a bond of a thousand pounds of tobacco that he would suffer no person, except his servants, to linger in his tavern on Sundays during the hours of Divine service in the parish church. (1671-84, p. 52.)

Gifts of ornaments, costly cups and plates to churches during the seventeenth century were frequent. In 1674 Christopher Lewis bequeathed to the church warden of Southwark parish "a silver flagon of two quarts measure", to William Thompson minister "1500 lbs. of tobacco" and "desires to be buried in ye chancel of ye church and to have a tombstone over me and a funeral sermon" preached for which his executors are to pay. (1671-8, p. 34. Book 2, p. 36.)

Captain George Watkins, who died in 1673 "Desires to be buried in the chancel of the church at Lawnes Creek Parish as his predecessors have been in the chancel of the parish churches where they dwelt" and bequeaths a thousand pounds of tobacco to the church for the purchase of a piece of silver plate. (Bk. 2, p. 36.)

George Jordan who died in 1678 provided in his will that "on the 15th day of every October a sermon of mortality be had at my house, the day my daughter Fortune Hunt died. If the day came on Sunday, Holy Communion to be given. Whoever shall enjoy the land, be it one thousand generations, who so possesses the land shall perform both Sermon and Prayer." Also he bequeathed to the church a baptismal basin of silver valued at three pounds sterling. In accordance with a wish often expressed in the wills of those times he "desired to be buried by wife and children in Major Browne's orchard. (Book 2, p. 191.)

In 1662 two worthy citizens of Surry were required to "stroke the the Governor's thirst for revenge, and he carried on his series of trials and executions, only substituting civil trials for military court-martials on March 3d. During this period of executions, two Baconians from Surry suffered the death penalty. On March 16, 1676/7 John Whitson and William Scarborough of Southwark Parish were convicted of "divers Rebellions Treasons and other misdemeanors", were sentenced to death, and shortly executed, their estates also being confiscated (Minutes of the Council and Gen. Court, p. 459-60, Hening Statutes, II, p. 370). Whitson was the son-in-law of Capt. Robert Spencer, one of the Justices of Surry, and left an only daughter, Martha Whitson. Scarborough's widow married (2) Thomas Tyus (O. B. 1671-90, p. 194). He, also, left descendants in the county.

Another Surry man selected for special punishment by the colonial government was Arthur Long of Lawnes Creek Parish, Bacon's captain. Berkeley called an Assembly at Green Spring February 20, 1676/7, and Long was among those who, as a "notorious actor" in the rebellion, was selected for punishment not extending to his life (Hening Statutes, II, p. 371). Later the Assembly enacted "that Arthur Long of Surry county doe upon his bended knees, with a rope about his necke acknowledge his treasons and rebellion before the right honourable the governour and councill, and begg pardon for his life, and that in like manner he doe acknowledge his crimes in the county court of Surry, and that he be committed to safe prison untill he shall give good security for his future good behavior (id., pp. 379-80). We do not know when this sentence was carried out before the Governor and Council, but the Surry records show that it was done July 4, 1677 in the Surry County Court (Book 2, p. 133), as follows: "At a Court held for Surry County July 4, 1677, Arthur Long appeared in Open Court and made the following submission with a rope about his neck on bended knees. 'I, Arthur Long, that all bystanders may take notice of this my sincere repentance of my Rebellion, do here most humbly upon my knees with a roape about my neck implore pardon of God, My King, the Hon. Governor, Council and Magistrates of this his Majesty's country and humbly crave the benefit of his Majesty's most gracious Acts of Mercy and Pardon for my treason and rebellion. And this my submission and his Majesty's royall pardon to be granted me thereupon may be entered on record to make the same available to me, in the pleading thereof if occasion shall hereafter be. God Save the King, and Prosper the Governor and Majistrates of the County, with all happiness and Good success." Another man, Anthony Hartland, was condemned by the General Court to make the same confession and do the same penance as Arthur Long before both the Surry and the Charles City County Courts (Hening II, p. 378). In addition he was fined 5,000 lbs. of tobacco. He seems to have been a Charles City man, however, and not a resident of Surry.

The colonial government seems not to have prosecuted the other two officers of Bacon in Surry, namely, Robert Burgess, Lieutenant, and William Simmons, Ensign, though both were later sued for depredations. The depositions of Elizabeth Blesley and Walter Taylor, given before, state that Robert Burgess was commonly called "Sert.", by which I suppose "Sergeant" is meant; but Arthur Allen in his suit brought against Burgess July 3, 1677 specifically states that Burgess bore the title of Lieutenant, and was Commander-in-Chief next to William Rookings (O. B. 1671-90, p. 145). Burgess was fined 8,000 lbs. of tobacco, the largest fine placed on any of the rebels, and was finally forced to mortgage his plantation to pay this debt. On April 20, 1678 Robert Burgess, blacksmith, and his wife Ann deeded to John Moreing and George Proctor, Gents., their plantation on Upper Chipooks Creek with brick house and other edifices, in return for Moreing and Proctor going on Burgess' bond for a debt of 6,315 lbs. of tobacco to Arthur Allen, for which he had been kept in prison many months (Book 2, p. 182). Burgess died in 1683 leaving no children, though he mentions children of his brother Thomas Burgess (id., p. 332-3). William Simmons received a smaller fine and seems to have succeeded in paying it more easily. He was the son of Mary Simmons of Burcher Swamp, Surry County, whose will, dated April 16, 1677 and probated May 7, 1678, mentions her son William and granddaughter Mary, and leaves legacies to John Rutherford and Francis Gregory, both of whom were Bacon's men (Book 2, p. 172). William Simmons' son John and grandson Benjamin Simmons were Burgesses from Southampton County in the 18th century. Of the other Baconian leaders in the county, Joseph Rogers confessed some of his pillaging and was fined. He was a tanner, and appears to have left no descendants in the county. He may have moved to North Carolina some time after the Rebellion, as a Joseph Rogers appears there in the early 18th century. John Rutherford was another, like Burgess, whose sufferings were long drawn out. On March 5, 1677/8, being already in prison because of a judgment to Robert Caufield for depredations at the latter's house, the sheriff went to arrest him again to answer charges made against him by John Solway, but Rutherford refused to come to court, and was in his absence condemned, and fined again (O. B. 1671-90, p. 195; Bk. 2, p. 162). He must have submitted finally, however, and got out of prison, as in 1681 he signed the guardian's bond for Thomas Cockerham, orphan of Capt. William Cockerham. Rutherford, also, is said to have left descendants in the county. All the above men were from Southwark Parish, except Long and Rogers.

The less prominent Baconians, to the number of 40, laid hold of the King's pardon February 6, 1676/7, as indicated by the following record (Book 2, p. 149):

We whose names are hereunto subscribed having heard and read of his Majesty's gracious and most surpassing acts of Pardon and Mercy . . . do with all humility and earnestness implore and lay hold on his Majesty's most gracious act of pardon aforesaid . . . and in conformity to his Majesty's royal instructions (pray it) may be entered on record.

Of the above 40 men, it is again noteworthy that practically all were from Southwark Parish. The 1675 list of tithables shows that 30 of them were positively Southwark men, 6 probably from Southwark judging by their surnames, 3 unidentifiable, and only one positively from Lawnes Creek Parish, namely, William Newitt. It looks as though Southwark was the stronghold of the Baconian movement, while Lawnes Creek tended to remain faithful to the Justices and the established government, though it can hardly be said that anyone in Surry County was an ardent partisan of Governor Berkeley. Most of the above men were small land-owners, several were freemen who worked on plantations belonging to others. Edward and William Pettway were father and son. Robert and Samuel Judkins were brothers, and stepsons of the aged Thomas Pittman, Senior, who had been a Lieutenant in the county militia. George Proctor later became a Justice of the county, and had married the widow of Major William Marriott, a former Burgess. John Hunnicutt's wife was the daughter of Thomas Warren, prominent in the early history of the county.

Although the above forty men had submitted to Berkeley's government, and one of them, George Williams, served on a jury which later on condemned a number of his fellow Baconians, there was still rebellion in the hearts of many at the return to the old unjust state of affairs. On March 26, 1677 eight of the above men were put under bond to keep the peace, especially toward "ye Rt Honoble Sr Wm. Berkeley Knt Governor and Capt Genll of Virginia" (Book 2, p. 119). They were Thomas Pittman, John Clements, Edward Pettway, William Blunt, Thomas Gibbons, John Skelton, Matthew Magnus and Stephen Allen. John Clements, we have noted, was called a leader among the Baconians and was later sued for depredations. We have already noted Thomas High's criticism against Col. Thomas Swann in Feb., 1676/7, indicating a feeling that the Baconians had first been encouraged by the authorities, and then punished for their action. On Feb. 17, 1676/7 Elizabeth Regan, wife of Daniel Regan of Southwark Parish (whom we have not heard of previously as involved in the rebellion), was accused of having at several times and in several places "fomented many Malignant & rebellious Words tending to sedition"; and the Court ordered Samuel Judkins, the Constable (himself a Baconian), to carry her to the common whipping place and give her ten lashes well laid on, on her bare back (O. B. 1671-90, p. 133). On September 4, 1677 Mary, the wife of John Skinner (one of the forty men above), was ordered to be given twenty lashes for "speaking words tending to sedition or mutiny, & in favour of the late rebellion"; and on the same date, John Skinner, her husband, was ordered to be arrested for the same reason (id., p. 154-5).

Besides the above forty men and their leaders, Rookings, Long, Burgess, Simmons, Rogers, Rutherford, Whitson and Scarborough, the later suits and additional documents show us others involved in the rebellion, Richard Atkins, John Rogers, Sr. (an old man, probably identical with a John Rogers who was Burgess from the county in 1644 and 1645), Owen Myrick, Richard Steele, John Ironmonger, Richard Browne, Thomas Hyard (possibly identical with Thomas High) all from Southwark Parish, and Henry Goard and Robert Kay from Lawnes Creek. We learn of the last two men's connection with the rebellion, not from the Surry records, but from those of the colony. Soon after regaining power, Governor Berkeley issued a warrant to seize the estate of Robert Kay and bring his sheep to Green Spring, and there is on record the certificate of Samuel Swann, sheriff, that he did seize and inventory the said estate January 30, 1676/7 (Calendar of Transcripts, Va. Dept. of Archives, Sainsbury Abstracts, Vol. XVI, p. 110). In April, 1677 there is on record the complaint of Henry Gord to the Commissioners of Virginia against Capt. Roger Potter (another Surry man), Gaoler of the prison at Green Spring, for not suffering him to leave, where he had been confined for one month by the Governor (id., p. 239). Others who were at least sympathetic with the Baconians were Adam Heath, Edward Green and John Immers, who signed a document along with several old Baconians which was extremely obnoxious to the Assembly of October, 1677. Other more doubtful cases we have learned of from the depositions—young Robert Lee who on an errand for the Baconians, took Capt. Barham's horse; Henry Francis, who let him have the horse; William Kitto and Roger Rawlings, who ferried Bacon's men across to Jamestown at the siege; "Mr. Bishop", to whom Thomas High reported that Col. Swann sent a note; John Price, who was under a singularly lax imprisonment by Bacon's men at the Allen house; Walter Taylor who visited the rebels at "Bacon's Castle"; Thomas Watson who was present at Francis Mason's house when he claimed that Owen Myrick and Richard Steele were looting; Nicholas Witherington and Thomas Sowersby, who were present at the seizure of John Solway's house, the latter saying that he was "forced to go with the rebels"; possibly, also, Lieut. Thomas Busby, at whose house no guard was found in the critical days of mid-September and who agreed to pay Arthur Allen damages, along with a number of Bacon's men, November 15, 1677 (O. B. 1671-90, p. 172), John Barker who agreed to pay Arthur Allen on the same date (id., p. 173), and even John Goring of Lawnes Creek, who was ordered to pay Robert Caufield 2,702 lbs. of tobacco May 1, 1677 (id., p. 137), although it is not stated that it was for damages done during the Rebellion. All these latter, however, are much more doubtful cases, and probably took no active part in the Rebellion.

Governor Berkeley's new Assembly met at Green Spring February 20, 1676/7, and Surry's representatives were William Browne and Benjamin Harrison, new Burgesses, but old Justices. The first act of the assembly was to pass an act of indemnity and pardon in accordance with the King's letters patent of October 10, 1676, but with twenty-five or thirty notable exceptions, among whom we have mentioned Rookings, Whitson, Scarborough and Long from Surry County. The next act was to abolish all the reform laws passed by "Bacon's Assembly" in June, 1676. However, some recognition of the need for reform was manifested (we suspect largely through the influence of the Royal Commissioners) by new laws making Members of the Council and ministers of the established Church pay levies; repealing the obnoxious amerциements, or taxes, on persons engaged in law-suits; and allowing six elected representatives of the people in each parish to sit with the vestrymen when parish levies were assessed. The Commissioners had brought orders from England, also, that the people of the various counties were to have the right freely to express their grievances and make formal petitions to the Assembly for remedial action. Thus we see that the influence of the Baconian movement was not entirely lost. Most of the counties availed themselves of this right at the new Assembly, though in a few (e.g., Westmoreland), the counties were so thoroughly under the thumbs of the oligarchy that the petitions did not really express the grievances of the people, and were rather ridiculous. This was not the case with Surry County, which handed in a lengthy set of "Grievances" as follows (Va. Mag. II, p. 170-173):

1. That ye last assembly continued many yeares and by their ffrequent meeting being once every yeare hath been a continuall charge and burthen to the poor Inhabitants of this Collony; and that the burgesses of the sd Assembly had 150 lb tobacco per day for each member they usually continueing for three or 4 weekes together did arise to a great some, And that the said assembly did give to severall
